'It's Complicated' Indeed

A California police department was called Monday to mediate a Facebook battle. A Grass Valley woman called Monday to complain that her ex had posted photos of her and refused to take them down. The man told authorities he'd removed the pictures. Two hours later, the ex called the police to report that the woman had posted nude photos of him on her Facebook page. Officers convinced the woman to delete the images. (AP)

A beloved former Fort Wayne, Ind., mayor who won four terms in the 1930s and 1950s is proving less popular with modern-day city leaders, who are balking at naming a new government center after him. The problem: Harry Baals pronounced his last name "balls." (His descendants changed it to "bales.") Supporters said it's unfair that the former mayor can't be recognized because his name makes some people snicker. (AP)

Stroke Risks Rise In Younger Crowd

Obesity is likely taking an 'alarming' toll on Americans, doctors say

Los Angeles

Strokes are rising dramatically among young and middle-aged Americans while dropping in older people, a sign that the obesity epidemic may be starting to reshape the age burden of the disease.

The numbers, reported Wednesday at an American Stroke Association conference, come from the first large nationwide study of stroke hospitalizations by age. Government researchers compared hospitalizations in 1994 and 1995 with ones in 2006 and 2007.

The sharpest increase — 51 percent — was among men 15 through 34. Strokes rose among women in this age group, too, but not as fast — 17 percent.

"It's definitely alarming," said Dr. Ralph Sacco, American Heart Association president and a neurologist at the University of Miami.

"We have worried for a while that the increased prevalence of obesity in children and young adults may take its toll in cardiovascular disease and stroke," and that appears to be happening, he said.

Stroke still takes its highest toll on older people. For those over 65, there were nearly 300 stroke cases among 10,000 hospitalizations in the more recent period studied. Still, strokes dropped 25 percent among men 65 and older and 28 percent among women in this age group.

Early estimates from 2007 death certificates suggest that stroke is now the nation's fourth-leading cause of death instead of the third, partly because of better treatments and prevention among the elderly.

Better awareness and better methods for detecting strokes could account for some of the change.

Several studies had recently suggested an ominous rise among the young and among middle-aged women.

Better awareness of stroke symptoms and better imaging methods for detecting strokes could account for some change, said Dr. Mary George, a stroke researcher at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Allison Hooker, a nurse at Forsyth Medical Center in Winston-Salem, N.C., said her hospital also is seeing more strokes in younger people with such risk factors as smoking, obesity, high blood pressure and alcohol overuse.

"I'd say at least half of our population [of stroke patients] is in their 40s or early 50s," she said, "and devastating strokes, too." (AP)

In Latest Milestone, Giffords Speaking

Progress continues in rehab with toast request, aide says

High Hopes

NASA astronaut Mark Kelly,

Rep. Gabrielle Giffords' husband, said last week that he expects his wife to be well enough to be at his space launch. The space shuttle Endeavour will leave April 19 with Kelly leading its final flight, a two-week mission to the International Space Station. Dr. Gerard Francisco, who is treating Giffords at a rehabilitation facility in Houston, said Tuesday that he hopes Giffords can make enough progress to attend the launch but that it's too early to say. (AP)

Giffords' husband, Mark Kelly, said his wife had her appetite back and was eating three times a day.

"It is hard to believe that only one month has passed since Gabrielle was shot," he wrote. "The doctors say she is recovering at lightning speed considering her injury but they aren't kidding when they say this is a marathon process." (AP)

Labor Unrest Erupts in Egypt

Thousands of state workers go on strike despite VP's warning

Cairo

Thousands of state workers and impoverished Egyptians went on strike Wednesday after weeks of anti-government protests cast a spotlight on corruption and the wealth amassed by those in power in a country where almost half the people live near the poverty line.

The protests calling for President Hosni Mubarak's ouster have been spreading since Tuesday outside of Cairo's Tahrir Square, where they have been concentrated for the past week. On Wednesday, demonstrators also gathered at parliament, the Cabinet and the Health Ministry buildings, all a few blocks from the square. Prime Minister Ahmed Shafiq was working out of the Civil Aviation Ministry on the other side of the city because his office was blocked by protesters.

For the first time, protesters were forcefully urging labor strikes

despite a warning by Vice President Omar Suleiman that calls for civil disobedience are "very dangerous for society, and we can't put up with this at all." His warnings Tuesday were taken by protesters as a thinly veiled threat of another crackdown.

Strikes erupted in a breadth of sectors — among railway and bus workers, state electricity staff and service technicians at the Suez Canal, in factories manufacturing textiles, steel and beverages, and at least one hospital.

"They were motivated to strike when they heard about how many billions the Mubarak family was worth," said Kamal Abbas, a labor leader.

Leverage

The United States should use its billions in aid to Egypt as leverage to force a transition to democracy, foreign policy experts told lawmakers Wednesday in Congress' first hearing since massive anti-government demonstrations for the ouster of President Hosni Mubarak. The Obama administration and Congress have struggled with the vexing problem of how to embrace a powerful democratic movement while dealing with longtime ally Mubarak, who clings to power despite the clamor for him to step down. (AP)

Egyptians have been infuriated by newspaper reports that the Mubarak family has amassed billions, and perhaps tens of billions of dollars in wealth while, according to the World Bank, about 40 percent of the country's 80 million people live below or near the poverty line of $2 a day.

Growing labor unrest is adding a new dimension to the pressures for Mubarak to step down. (AP)

Berlusconi Decries Trial

Italian PM: Charges of sex cover-up offend dignity of country

Milan

Premier Silvio Berlusconi faced the most serious challenge yet to his grip on power as Italian prosecutors sought to put him on trial in a seamy prostitution scandal involving a 17-year-old Moroccan girl that has both titillated and divided the nation.

The prosecutors filed a request Wednesday for Berlusconi to be tried quickly in Milan, on charges the 74-year-old leader had sex with the girl and then tried to cover it up by using his power. Moments later, speaking in Rome, Berlusconi accused them of seeking to topple his government, saying they had "offended the dignity of the

Child Prostitution Charge

The prosecutors assert that Premier Silvio Berlusconi paid for sex with the girl, nicknamed Ruby, who has since turned 18, then used his influence to get her out of police custody when she was detained in an unrelated suspected theft of $4,103. Berlusconi's supporters say he made the call to Milan police only to avert a diplomatic incident because Berlusconi believed at the time that the girl was the niece of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. country" with a smear campaign and groundless allegations. "I'm not worried in the slightest," Berlusconi said Wednesday of the prostitution case.

Though Berlusconi is no stranger to legal cases, this is the first judicial action against the three-time premier and media billionaire to impugn his personal conduct, rather than his business dealings. The case raises questions about Berlusconi's ability to govern effectively under mounting legal pressure.

A judge now must decide whether to dismiss the prosecutors' request or go ahead with a trial — which would add to the premier's already substantial legal worries. A decision is expected within two weeks, just as two unrelated trials and one preliminary legal hearing are about to resume in Milan. (AP)

The Orange and Blue Lines between Metro Center and L'Enfant Plaza stations will be closed from 10 p.m. Friday, February 18 until 5 a.m. Tuesday, February 22.

Federal Triangle and Smithsonian stations will also be closed.

● Station and track closing

From 10 p.m. Friday, February 18 until 5 a.m. Tuesday, February 22, Metro crews will replace four track switches at Smithsonian station to comply with National Transportation Safety Board recommendations.

Federal Triangle and Smithsonian stations — as well as the Orange and Blue Lines between Metro Center and L'Enfant Plaza stations — will be closed.

Avoiding the work area

You may transfer at Metro Center and L'Enfant Plaza and detour through Gallery Pl-Chinatown station using the Red and Yellow/Green lines. Or you may use the free shuttle bus service (with free transfers in and out of the rail system). Buses will loop between Metro Center and L'Enfant Plaza stations approximately every 10 minutes with stops near Smithsonian and Federal Triangle stations.

At Smithsonian station, the bus stop will be in the westbound lane of Independence Avenue, just east of 12th Street SW.

At Federal Triangle station, the bus stop will be in the northbound lane of 12th Street near the station entrance.

Signs will direct you to the shuttle bus stops.

If you plan to use Metrorail through the work area, please add 40 minutes to your trip time.

● Red Line single-tracking

Over this weekend, Metro will also perform work on two sections of the Red Line:

- Between Shady Grove and Twinbrook stations. Trains will share one track to allow for platform repairs at Rockville station.
- Between New York Ave-Florida Ave-Gallaudet U and Rhode Island Ave-Brentwood stations. Trains will share one track to allow for ongoing rehabilitation of the Red Line.

At Metro Center station, the bus stop will be in the northbound lane of 11th Street between F and G streets, NW.

At L'Enfant Plaza station, the bus stop will be in the eastbound lane of Maryland Avenue at 7th Street SW (in front of station entrance).

This work will require trains to share one track through the affected areas and could increase your trip time by up to 20 minutes.

How the advent of Twitter language and texting has changed the way we speak

New York

"ILY!" Susan Maushart's 16-year-old daughter often calls out over her shoulder as she leaves the house. Sure, actual words would be better. But Mom knows not to complain.

"A mother of teenagers is pathetically grateful for an 'I love you' no matter what form it takes," she observes.

Then there are the various forms of "LOL" that her teens use in regular parlance — it's become a conjugable verb by now. And of course, there's the saltier acronym used by son Bill: "WTF, Mom?!" But before you judge, note that former vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin just used that one in a TV interview. And CNN's Anderson Cooper used it on his show the other night.

OMG

Acronyms have been around for years. But with the advent of text and Twitter language, it certainly feels like we're speaking in groups of capital letters a lot more. It's a question that intrigues linguists and other language aficionados — even though they'll tell you they have absolutely no concrete research on it.

"It's fascinating," says Scott Kiesling, a socio-linguist and professor at the University of Pittsburgh. "What is it that makes OMG and WTF and LOL so useful that they spread from the written to the spoken form?"

One possibility, Kiesling proposes, is that some of these acronyms actually become a whole new thought, expressing something different than the words that form them. For example: "You wouldn't say, 'OMG, that person just jumped off a cliff,'" he explains. "But you'd say, 'OMG, do you see those red pants that person is wearing?'"

WTF

Which brings us to WTF, an acronym that needs no translation. When Palin used the expression recently in a Fox News interview — twice in two sentences, actually — some pundits were a little shocked. (Palin was playing on the president's "Win the Future" message in his State of the Union speech.)

"That's going to be a tough one for her to come back from and explain," remarked conservative commentator Pat Buchanan on MSNBC's "Morning Joe." Host Joe Scarborough simply shook his head and said: "Not

Backstory

Acronyms date back to ancient times, as Robert Lane Greene, author of the upcoming book "You Are What You Speak," points out — the Romans and the Greeks used them. In the United States, they came into prominence in the early 20th century with the New Deal, the series of economic programs passed during the first term of Franklin D. Roosevelt — who, of course, became known by his three initials. They are widely used in the military and today's government bureaucracy. (AP)

"People have been complaining about what the kids are doing to the language since ancient times, and Latin. Language is always changing. It's a fact of life."

very presidential."

But the chatter died down quickly, and Palin is not the only prominent person to use the expression on TV recently. On "Anderson Cooper 360" Monday night, the host was commenting on rapper B.o.B.'s use of an airplane's public address system to perform for the captive passengers. "WTF, B.o.B.?" Cooper asked.

Imagine if he'd said the actual words — a quick call from network executives might have ensued. But WTF seems to have become a winking way of saying something with a little edge, a little bite, without being truly offensive.

It can also be a good icebreaker with an audience. "I do a lot of public speaking," says Maushart, the mother of three, who is also an author (the recent "Winter of our Disconnect"). "And if there is one utterance that I always know will get a laugh, it is WTF. It establishes that you are kind of with it."

K-DOT

And so she doesn't mind when her kids use it. If only she could keep up with all their other acronyms. They've graduated from the simple LOL and LOLOL to LMAO — literally, laughing so hard that part of your body comes off (for extra credit, use LMAOOTF — it means it's all happening on the floor).

Her youngest, Sussy, 16, seems particularly advanced. These days, she has started saying "K-Dot." Translation: OK, but with a finality to it, as in, end of discussion, "K" followed by a period, ergo: "K-Dot."

Not avant-garde enough for you? Try this: Sussy also is known to SPEAK a question mark when asking a question, as in: "Do you really want me to do that, question mark?" JOCELYN NOVECK (AP)

Metro Speeds Up SmarTrip

Transit system to install devices to ease customer movement at fare gates

Metro is installing new equipment designed to improve SmarTrip card performance at fare gates and speed the movement of customers through the rail system.

Metro is putting plastic domes over each of the SmarTrip card readers on every fare gate, with about 1,400 of 1,700 installed so far. The installation is expected to be completed next week, Metro spokeswoman Angela Gates said. The cost of the project is about $45,000, she said.

Metro implemented the most expansive fare increase in its history last summer, requiring its fare collection technology to handle more complex transactions. The changes meant it took longer for the circular SmarTrip targets to read the electronic fare cards and slowed down customers moving through the fare gates.

The solution had been for customers to hold their cards over the targets for a beat longer than they were accustomed to.

The domes are intended to allow the antenna of the SmarTrip card reader to be better positioned to communicate with the card, Gates said.

Specifically, it improves "the range at which the card will enter into communications with the target, which results in the unit's ability to read SmarTrip cards better and thus enable our customers to pass through the fare gates faster," she said.

Customer reaction to the devices was mixed, with some saying they helped, others saying they slowed down the card reading, and some not noticing the change.

One and Done for Va. Sen. Webb

Decision not to run leaves battleground seat ripe for GOP

Richmond, Va.

Sen. James Webb, D-Va., announced Wednesday that he would not run for a second term in 2012, ending an unusual Senate career and ensuring that the race to replace him will be among the most intense contests in the country.

In a statement issued by his office, Webb did not specifically explain why he had decided to retire. Webb's departure gives Republicans a prime opportunity to win back a seat in a critical political battleground state and could boost the GOP's chances of retaking the Senate.

Webb, elected in 2006 in a heated race against Sen. George Allen a Republican, has been an idiosyncratic figure on Capitol Hill — a serious thinker and legislator who never seemed to embrace the more political and personal aspects of the job such as raising money and attending ceremonial events. That visible discomfort and his persistently low fundraising numbers prompted some Virginia political observers to predict Webb would do exactly what he did Wednesday.

Allen has launched a bid to reclaim his old seat, and Jamie Radtke, former chairwoman of the Virginia Tea Party Patriots Federation, is also running for the post.

Allen has criticized Webb repeatedly in recent weeks for his positions on key issues, but he was more respectful of his former foe Wednesday.

"I respect Senator Webb's service to our country and the very personal decision that he and his family have made," Allen said in a statement released by his campaign. "I did not enter into this race to run against any one person, but to fight for the families of Virginia to improve their opportunities in life." BEN PERSHING AND ROSALIND S. 5 years after their Final 4 run, Patriots appear NCAA-bound

George Mason Hoops

George Mason is at it again, leading a mid-major charge against the NCAA's big boys.

The Patriots have won 10 in a row, have bumped their RPI into the high 20s and are receiving votes in The Associated Press Top 25 poll. They look good enough to make the NCAA tournament even if they don't win their conference, something that last happened in 2006, the year of their improbable run to the Final Four.

"Even when I go to my classes, my professors still bring up the Final Four," said junior Ryan Pearson, the Colonial Athletic Association's player of the week. "And I'm, like, 'I wasn't a part of that. I want to make my own history here.'"

6 of 12

The number of CAA teams that have RPIs in the top 100. The CAA this season is closing in on the basketball-proud ACC, which has eight of 12 squads in the top 100. (AP)

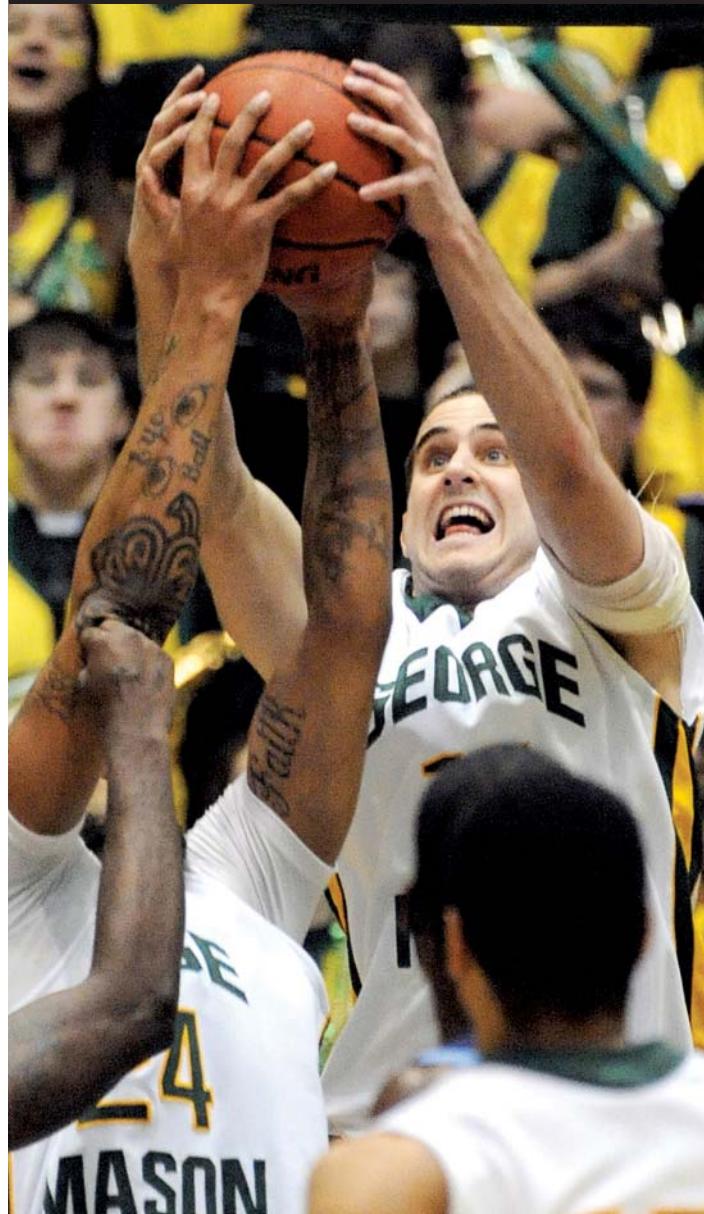

Most intriguingly, George Mason is at the crest of a CAA wave that could land three or more schools in the NCAAs for the first time in conference history. The CAA has been making the case for years that it deserves better than its usual one-bid status, and this year the computers say the conference has a good argument.

LITTLE BIG MEN

The Patriots, of course, were the subject of much debate when they were made an at-large selection five years ago, but they justified it by winning the East Regional in one of the best little-guy-makes-good stories of the last decade.

Except that George Mason isn't a little guy — it's the biggest university in Virginia by enrollment — and it now can no longer be picked on as a "commuter school," at least not officially.

HERE THEY GO AGAIN

TRACY A. WOODWARD/TWP

"You can't get into the top 30 or 40 teams in the country by somehow rigging your schedule. You have to win games. And I don't care what league you're in: Playing a conference opponent on the road is difficult."

— GEORGE MASON COACH JIM LARRANAGA, ON HOW TEAMS IN SMALL CONFERENCES CAN MUSCLE THEIR WAY INTO THE BIG DANCE OVER POWER CONFERENCE SQUADS.

Making Their Case

In a bit of unusual marketing, George Mason posted video on its athletic website (Gomason.com) in which a female bear educates a potential suitor — who's more familiar with another green and yellow team (the Green Bay Packers) — on the strengths of this year's George Mason squad, drawing comparisons to the 2006 Final Four team. (EXPRESS)

But the Patriots have been back to the NCAAs just once since the Final Four run, losing in the first round to Notre Dame in 2008. Last year's young team slumped its way to something called the CollegeInsider.com tournament, and last fall coach Jim Larranaga took the team on trip to Italy to get rid of cliques and get the players focusing more on defense. "We really got to bond as a team," senior guard Isaiah Tate said.

NUMBERS GAME

While the various RPIs might differ by a spot or two, all generally have George Mason and Old Dominion in the top 30. Virginia Commonwealth and Drexel are hovering between 50 and 60. It's not hard to picture a scenario of, say, VCU winning the conference tournament, with GMU and ODU both getting NCAA at-large bids.

Yet George Mason's list of victories is hardly daunting. The Patriots are 20-5, but their biggest out-of-conference wins came against Harvard and Duquesne. Old Dominion's biggest conquests are Xavier and Dayton, which leads to the question: Has the CAA figured out how to rig the system?

"That's a bunch of malarkey," said Jim Sukup, publisher of the Collegiate Basketball News RPI. "What it boils down to is that everything has to fall into place for you."

NFL Fans File Suit Over Seat Fiasco

Dallas' Jones, league accused of fraud after flap at Super Bowl

Pro Football

Ticket-holding football fans who ended up with no seats or what they considered bad views of the Super Bowl have filed a class-action lawsuit against the NFL, the Dallas Cowboys and team owner Jerry Jones.

The federal lawsuit filed Tuesday in Dallas — just two days after the big game — alleges breach of contract, fraud and deceptive sales practices on behalf of people who ended up watching the game on TV at Cowboys Stadium in Arlington, or had seats the lawsuit labeled “illegitimate.”

One plaintiff is a Steelers fan from Pennsylvania who was among the 400 with a ticket but no seat after 1,250 temporary seats were

Payback Plan

The NFL has said that the roughly 400 fans who bought tickets for the temporary seats but were forced to watch the game on TV monitors or from standing-room-only areas have two options. The first is a ticket to next year's Super Bowl and a cash payment of $2,400, three times the face value of the ticket. The second is a ticket to any future Super Bowl, along with round-trip airfare and hotel accommodations. (AP) deemed unsafe. The other is a Cowboys season ticket holder who claims many of Jones' biggest-spending fans were stuck in metal folding chairs without a view of the stadium's giant video board.

Los Angeles-based attorney Michael J. Avenatti said he expects the suit to cover about 1,000 people.

THE STREETS OF ALEXANDRIA

may seem straight out of a Norman Rockwell painting, but they are killing grounds in the mind of thriller writer Mary Burton. Her two latest novels, "Merciless" and "Senseless" (each $7, Zebra Books), follow detectives as they hunt down murderous psychopaths in Old Town. Burton wrote eight books of historical fiction before turning her pen on present-day Alexandria, where she's set several of her five pulp thrillers. Express spoke to Burton about the dark corners of the Virginia suburbs.

Did you change any details about Alexandria for your newest books?

The murder rate goes up a couple hundred percent. It's going to keep rising in the next book. I did the same to the Richmond area in my first three [thriller] novels ["Dying Scream," "Dead Ringer, and "I'm Watching You"].

What's the scariest place in Alexandria?

Anyplace can be dangerous. You always have to have your eyes and ears open. If you live in a nice neighborhood and you think there's a veil of safety around you, there's not. In my stories, I always try to bring danger into those seemingly safe places.

What's your advice on how to avoid serial killers?

Don't talk on your phone at night, because you'll have a false impression of connectedness and security. Carry your keys in your hand. It's all basic stuff, but people in suburbia don't worry about it as much.

In "Merciless," one of the killers makes jewelry out of human bones. If you bought a piece, what would you choose?

None of them are on my wish list for Valentine's Day. I'm amazed people actually make that stuff — you can go on the Internet to buy them.

You're also into cooking. What do you make to cure writer's block?

I've worked out a lot of plot twists while baking. You can tell how my book is going by the number of cupcakes on the counter. NEVIN MARTELL

The Irish Heart of 'Inishmaan'

Director Garry Hynes puts Druid Theatre Company on the map

Theater Q&A

There are few reminders of an Irish family making good in the U.S. as grandiose as the Kennedy Center. So it's fitting that "The Cripple of Inishmaan," Martin McDonagh's play about Irish peasants starstruck by a Hollywood director's nearby film set, is at the Kennedy Center through this weekend, courtesy of Ireland's Druid Theatre Company. Director Garry Hynes spoke with Express about Irish theater, at home and abroad.

Why do you think there's such a fascination in America with Ireland and Irish literature?

I think there's a huge diaspora. And of course, a great part of that diaspora is in America. It's also the quality of our writing. Plays by people like Martin McDonagh and Brian Friel attract huge audiences not because they're Irish, but because they're brilliant plays.

In 1998, you were the first woman to win a Tony Award, for directing "The Beauty Queen of Leenane."

On the one hand, it's a great honor.

NICK BURCHELL

"The Cripple of Inishmaan," directed by Garry Hynes, runs through Saturday.

On the other hand, it feels as strange to say it now as it did when I was first nominated. People said, "If you should actually win, you would be the first woman." And I thought it had to be a mistake. Of course, about seven minutes after I won, Julie Taymor won a Tony Award for directing "The Lion King." [Taymor won for musical direction, Hynes in the play category.] So, no women at all for 50 years and then two in seven minutes.

Do women have much of a presence in the Irish theater community as directors or writers?

I think women are in much the same place in the Irish theater as they are everywhere else. Certainly, we have wonderful Irish writers, and we have quite a number of Irish women directors. But there could be more, and there should be more. FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

STATE OF ALERT

Hometown hero Henry Rollins looks back at 50 years of writing, ranting and rocking

Turning 50 is a big deal. But what do you get the punk icon who's done everything? The decades have made hometown hero Henry Rollins more than the sum of his many tattoos: Years after fronting the legendary band Black Flag, he's published a slew of books, hit the big screen in more than 15 films and, most recently, turned into a TV personality — appearing in the "National Geographic Explorer" special "Born to Rage" this past December and in a "Snake Underworld" episode of "Nat Geo Wild" set to air early this year.

"All of these things allow me to be this jagged, schizophrenic mosaic that I am," he says.

And on Sunday, Rollins will get a special birthday wish: celebrating his 50th before an audience at National Geographic Live!, "waxing psychotic" about adventures past and future.

Ahead of his appearance Sunday, Express pressed Rollins about his long and varied career. STEPHEN M. DEUSNER

• National Geographic Live!, 1600 M St. NW; Sun., 7 & 9:30 p.m.; $35; 202-857-7700. (Farragut North)

The PUNK ROCKER

After a very short tenure with D.C. punk act State of Alert, Rollins moved in 1981 from D.C. to Los Angeles, where he joined hardcore band Black Flag as the group's new front man. Over five years and countless perilous live shows, he developed a reputation as a brutally blunt lyricist and aggressive performer, prowling the stage in nothing but a pair of loose black shorts that accentuated his muscular physique and extensive tattoos.

Today, Rollins has all but retired from music. "I don't even think about it anymore," he says. "If we can say that music is a bell, I rang it really hard, very frequently, and with a great sense of urgency — to the point of breaking it. But I didn't ring it with any great deal of distinction or finesse. So, there's really nothing more for me to do in music but be a hackneyed character."

The ACTOR

In the 1990s, Rollins landed bit parts in a string of high-profile films, including Michael Mann's "Heat," David Lynch's "Lost Highway" and, for some reason, the Michael Keaton kiddie flick "Jack Frost." In recent years, Rollins has won meatier roles on television, including a stint as an incredibly threatening neo-Nazi on FX's "Sons of Anarchy."

"It's pretty obvious that I'm not a neo-Nazi, but I am when I'm on that show," he says. "It's an interesting intellectual process to deal with, because the only way to put that part over is to really believe in it at that moment."

The WRITER

Rollins founded his 2.13.61 publishing imprint in 1984 to put his journals and spoken-word performances in book form. His prose — including the gut-wrenchingly beautiful "See a Grown Man Cry/Now Watch Him Die," which dealt with the murder of his best friend in 1991 — is as bare and provocative as his music.

More recently, Rollins has gone the journalist route, penning a current events column for Vanity Fair and covering music for L.A. Weekly.

"That allows me to do what a lot of people do in this country: Be a pundit," Rollins says with a laugh. "I supply useless content to the already overburdened Internet. I don't care if it needs more or not — I'm giving it more."

The WORLD TRAVELER

After gloriously misspending his youth in a smelly tour van, Rollins has a deep-seated aversion to gathering moss. "That's what I do with my hard-earned money: I buy plane tickets and I go," he says. "I force myself to go into these environments that are either semi-threatening or relatively untraveled. I know it's going to be interesting and I'm going to learn something."

A recent trip took him to Pyongyang, North Korea — a vacation that was treacherous but revelatory. "I wondered if I knew more about North Korea than the tour guide, because he can't read anything critical of the country," he says. "With no hint of irony, these guys tell you how great Kim Il Sun was and how great Kim Jong Il is."

One of Rollins' favorite destinations remains Africa, which he visits every chance he gets.

"Once you connect with that continent — and I've been pretty far and wide — it gets in your blood. When I come back from Africa, I go into withdrawals. I miss it so badly."

Suzannah Vaughan's sculptures of D.C. landmarks capture an imagined identity

Gallery

How do non-native Washingtonians imagine the capital? Do monuments loom larger than life? Does the city shine with marble buildings and architectural marvels?

The space between the imagined and the real is the subject of Suzannah Vaughan's exhibit "Tracing Form" at the Flashpoint Gallery. Vaughan, an Irish artist and member of Flashpoint's Irish organization-in-residence, Solas Nua, created all the pieces in the show before she ever set foot in D.C.

The miniature sculptures in the gallery are blockish white stone structures with colored glass "windows" lit naturally or with LEDs to create the illusion of space. Each work depicts a Washington landmark — and each was created using only Internet references and Vaughan's imagination.

Vaughan says she took inspiration for "Tracing Form" from "Alpine Architecture," Bruno Taut's seminal 1917 work filled with "utopian buildings that could never exist." She researched D.C.'s landscape before making pieces based on "what I imagined Washington to be like — its potential and possibility. When a building is done, it's almost like a full stop. My work is more like a suggestion of what it could be" if construction never ended, she says.

For "Tracing Form," Suzannah Vaughan sculpted D.C. landmarks she'd not yet seen.

"When a building is done, it's almost a full stop. My work is more like a suggestion of what it could be."

Her sculptures capture the essence of certain sites — the curves of the Hirshhorn Museum, the classical elegance of the Lincoln Memorial — while they are also completely original creations. Vaughan also incorporates her own biography into her work, especially in her choice of oceanic glass colors.

"I'm from the west coast of Ireland, and I drew on the tones of light in the sky there," Vaughan says.

"When I moved to Dublin, I missed that light and sense of space — the dramatic blues and hues of grey. The architecture [in Washington] suited it so well."

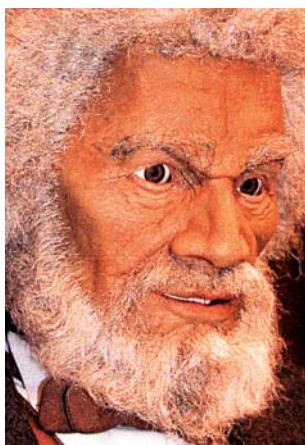

Vaughan is not finished interpreting the city; while living here as a Flashpoint artist in-residence, she plans to make work based on the "real" D.C. Through site visits, Vaughan will "make drawings and paper models — more ephemeral materials that are the opposite of sculpture."

"I'm interested in making two pieces that are the opposite of each other," Vaughan says. "First, out of imagined space, then by working out of my actual experience."

Douglas Waller's new book digs up the dirt on spying's glory days

Books

Columnists doubling as covert spies! Late-night embassy break-ins in Dupont! Scenes from the next Clooney blockbuster? No: They're the origins of the Central Intelligence Agency. Such strategies were also favored by "Wild Bill," or William Joseph Donovan, leader of the Office of Strategic Services (the precursor to the CIA), during World War II. Donovan, known as the father of American intelligence, is the subject of Douglas Waller's biography "Wild Bill Donovan" ($30, Free Press).

The methods seem straight out of a Bourne film, but were appropriate for an era Waller calls "the glory days" of espionage. "Agents infiltrating enemy lines, commandos carrying out discrete sabotage operations — any idea was fair game," Waller says.

Donovan had a distinct brand of leadership. Courting the press for publicity, he promoted his agency with gusto, pulling operatives from every imaginable profession. "He wanted what he called the 'disciplined daring': playwrights, college presidents, captains of industry," Waller says.

Despite his visionary tactics, Donovan was passed over when the time came to select a director of the newly formed CIA. "People worshipped him or despised him. Some people thought he was worse than Adolf Hitler," says Waller. "But his operatives thought he walked on water."

The controversial figure remains relevant today. "I've said ... that the Pentagon could use a 'Wild Bill' Donovan — just not two of them," says Waller.

Since 9/11, analysts have toyed with the idea of returning to a creative approach to espionage. Does the War on Terror need a nimble body like the OSS working alongside the CIA?

Waller has mixed feelings. "It'd be like bringing back the cavalry charge," he says. "But then again, you have CIA special ops officers on horseback in Afghanistan today."

Waller thinks Donovan would be pleased with the CIA's growth, but disappointed by the WikiLeaks security breaches: "There's the saying that the intelligence community was built by a drunken architect. Donovan would think it hasn't sobered up yet." KATHERINE BOYLE (EXPRESS)

Anxiety-producing name aside, D.C. punk band Coke Bust packs local house shows and alternative performance venues.

It's the Real Thing

Coke Bust takes punk inspiration from a bygone D.C. scene

Music

In Washington, D.C., calling your band Coke Bust is going to conjure one thing: a certain politician, being "set up" in a certain Vista Hotel.

But while Coke Bust's speedy punk recalls the Dischord Records bands that reigned over D.C.'s rock scene in Marion Barry's '80s heyday, the connection ends there.

"The band [name] was not inspired by Marion Barry," says vocalist Nicktape (just Nicktape). "Our deadbeat friend, Rich, suggested it out of the blue, and it stuck."

The kids in Coke Bust — Nick-tape, guitarist Jeremy Evans, bassist Jubert and drummer Chris Moore — were in diapers when Minor Threat was ruling the Wilson Center. But the band is glad to be a torchbearer of D.C.'s old-school scene.

"I feel a connection to Dischord in the sense that we share the DIY ethic," says Moore. "I have infinite respect for it."

On Friday night, Coke Bust debuts its new EP, "Degradation," with a show at Hole in the Sky, one of the city's newest DIY venues. The Eckington space is an incubator for emerging local music, visual arts and performance, and has been putting on low-key shows of local and touring bands since last year.

Nicktape says that's a good barometer of the health of D.C.'s indie music scene.

"It's awesome. The problems that have traditionally existed are low turnouts and a lack of venues," he says. "And more kids have been coming out."

Playing a semi-organized show is a step up for Coke Bust, which has made a name for itself on D.C.'s house-show circuit.

"Any house show is always fun for me," says Nicktape. "The smaller the space, the more cramped, the crazier the atmosphere, and the fewer rules the better. We played a Halloween show a few years ago with kids throwing stolen pumpkins at us and each other. Pure mayhem. That was the best."

Laptop Pop, Take Me Away

Baths warms up the beat head landscape on the new 'Cerulean'

Music

At age 21, Will Wiesenfeld is already a veteran musician and producer, with more than 20 full-length albums to his name. Or, more accurately, to all his names: The classically trained California native has been recording since he was 14 under monikers including Post-Foetus and Geotic.

It was as Baths that Wiesenfeld wrote and recorded 2010's "Cerulean," a laptop-pop collection of chomping beats, exuberant melodies and elaborate soundscapes that landed on numerous year-end lists and earned him a growing following.

"It was intended very much to be a first album," he says. "I built it with that idea in mind and thought it would be my first album to make an impression on the public, to get a wider release than just me giving it to all my friends."

Though Wiesenfeld says he's settled on Baths as a permanent musical identity, his other projects keep him on a rigorous creative regimen. He recorded the recent Geotic album "Mend" in five days over a holiday break, then released it as a free download. "I'm thinking about music all the time," he says — even producing new work on the road. "All of a sudden, I have songs I don't even remember recording."

Wiesenfeld says he already has his next Baths album mapped out, and that it will be darker than the sunny sound of "Cerulean."

If it seems that making music borders on an obsession for Wiesenfeld, at least it's a habit that works to the benefit of his art.

"This is not something that I fell into by accident by any means," he says. "It's what I've wanted to do since the sixth or seventh grade. I plan on making music for my entire life." STEPHEN M. DEUSNER

An 'Instrument' of Truth

Fugazi's Ian MacKaye looks back on a film that chronicles the early days of the band

Film Q&A

In 1987, before the now-legendary D.C. punk band Fugazi had even played its first show, filmmaker Jem Cohen was already rolling tape at the band's Washington rehearsal space. Cohen, who met vocalist Ian MacKaye when they were Washington high school students, shot the band for nearly 10 years. The result was the 1998 film "Instrument," a visual document of the group's career and one of several Cohen films screening as part of the "Jem Cohen: Curious Visions" series opening Saturday at the National Gallery of Art.

Members of Fugazi will introduce "Instrument" when it screens Feb. 27. Ahead of that appearance, Express reached MacKaye at the Dischord offices to discuss the film's meaning more than a decade on.

"Life doesn't have a narrative arc. It's not a documentary, but it's true. It's not a concert film, but there's music."

"Instrument" doesn't play like a typical rock documentary. What did you and Jem Cohen intend this film to be?

Modern-day documentaries are essentially fiction; they have narrative arcs. Life doesn't have a narrative arc, in my opinion. It's not a documentary, but it's true. It's not a narrative, but there's a story. It's not a concert film, but there's music.

The film isn't just about Fugazi, but also the culture that grew up around the band.

We decided that we wanted to include the audience in the film because we felt Fugazi wouldn't exist without our audience. Jem was going out with a video camera before and after our shows and interviewing people. We have dozens and dozens of interviews.

Have you revisited the movie?

Occasionally, I look at it. I look at it and think, "Jem is so good, so talented." I don't know any other movie about people in a band that's anything like it. But Fugazi, we're a weird bunch of people. Music kicks our ass, and we intend to return that favor.

take five

"The Roommate" delivers valuable life lessons, such as "Try to live alone."

1 The Roommate

In its fascination with girl-on-girl action, "The Roommate" plays like the ultimate indulgence of leering Hollywood executives, eager to ogle pulchritudinous college girls and call it work.

2 Sanctum

The movie is most convincing when the characters have air tubes in their mouths, and it's always cause for alarm when the adventurers stop swimming to talk out some conflict.

3 No Strings Attached

Thanks to the immense likability of the movie's stars (Natalie Portman and Ashton Kutcher), "No Strings Attached" is an often entertaining look at two people giving their relationship the hooking-up-like-they're-in-college try.

4 The King's Speech

There's nothing not to love about Tom Hooper's historical drama, which tells the story of how Britain's King George VI (Colin Firth) overcame a debilitating stutter and went on to lead the country through World War II.

5 The Green Hornet

There was a time when movies about superheroes were full of angst. Then this punk, the Green Hornet, shows up. His movie's fun. It's light-hearted. It's full of jokes. Heroes don't tell jokes. The Riddler tells jokes.

"Let's Pollute," a satire about how trashing Earth's environment is awesome. There's also "The Gruffalo," about a mouse who creates a terrifying creature to scare off predators; "The Lost Thing," a story of a kid who finds a mysterious animal who doesn't fit in anywhere; and "Madagascar, Carnet de Voyage," a travelogue about Malagasy culture and society. (Parents, take note: These animated films are not necessarily suitable for kids, as one family who fled the expletive-laden "Logorama" three minutes into last year's screening discovered.)

Keep It Short & Sweet

indies & arties

It's kind of a dead time at the movies right now, with all the Oscar bait having been gnawed to the bone and summer blockbusters yet to arrive. Unless, of course, you're willing to shorten your attention span, skip the features and check out the E Street Cinema's screening of Oscar-nominated shorts. (As a nerdy bonus, this trip will boost your chances of winning the office Oscar pool.)

There are 10 films total; five in each category. The live-action category includes "The Confession," a film about a 9-year-old British boy dreading his first confession; "God of Love," in which a darts champion receives a box of darts that stir up the passions of those punctured; "The Crush," in which a second-grader challenges his beloved teacher's boyfriend to a duel to the death; and "Wish 143," about an ailing 15-year-old boy who, in a move the Make a Wish Foundation probably wouldn't make, is granted an hour alone with a naked woman.

But the animated shorts on offer look to be the most creative: This year, nominees range from Pixar's adorable "Day & Night" to

1 Love Stinks

We elevate strange behavior to the realm of the romantic: teenagers killing themselves over a two-day whirlwind love affair, scruffy dudes hoisting boom boxes outside your window, vampires staring at you while you sleep. But Preston Sturges' "The Palm Beach Story" might be the most puzzling one of all: It's about a man trying to win back his wife (Claudette Colbert, above) after she leaves him because they're poor and she thinks she can do him more good if she lands a wealthy husband. Ain't love grand? That should be fun to work out in couples therapy. → AFI Silver, 8633 Colesville Road, Silver Spring; Thu., 9:10 p.m.; 301-495-6720, Afi.com/silver. ## 4 You're the Inspiration

Yeah, you could go to dinner and ice skating on Valentine's Day. You know who else does that? Everyone. Much more original is Del Ray Artisans' latest exhibition, "Love Letters," featuring pieces by local artists accompanied by a love letter to the person who inspired the work. A word of caution: If you take your significant other here, he or she may expect you to create muse-inspired paintings or poems. No pressure.

House of Wax

The members of the David Wax Museum may look like Brooklyn Barbie and Ken, but their music, a Mexican-folk hybrid that encourages a lot of audience participation, is anything but plastic. Odd instruments, close harmonies and hooky musical phrases abound. → Sixth and I Historic Synagogue, 600 1st NW; Sat., 8 p.m., $12, $10 in advance; 877-435-9849, Sixthandi.org. ### Fine Art

We see the connection between Valentine's Day and a scavenger hunt through the nudes in the National Gallery's collection. We don't entirely approve, because we're not 14-year-old boys, but we see the connection. Watson Adventures is holding two Valentine's Day weekend scavenger hunts that will send participants running to examine various depictions of naked people. Already have a police record? Fear not: You will not be asked to scavenge any actual objets d'art. → National Gallery of Art, Constitution Avenue at 6th Street NW; Sat. and Sun., 2 p.m., $25; 866-811-4111, Watsonadventures.com. ### Bird Is The Word

Taffety Punk specializes in brave, highly physical, off-the-wall productions that are difficult to explain in a few sentences. For "Owl Moon," we can say only that it's about depression and neuroses and love and a talking bird. And a man face-down and bloody in the snow. Which is a long way of saying that you have to see it to get it. → Capitol Hill Arts Workshop, 545 7th St. SE; through Feb. 26, $10; 800-838-3006, Taffetypunk.com. # EAT YOUR HEART OUT

Fine diner extraordinaire Don Rockwell plans your romantic Valentine's Day, from morning to night

Don Rockwell is the rainmaker of reservations. He can secure the most coveted tables at the best restaurants — even when everything is supposedly booked solid.

"I don't want to sound arrogant, but when I call, people pick up," says Rockwell.

His concierge service, DC Dining, which debuted at the end of last year, designs culinary experiences. Whether you're trying to score a private room at a top-tier steakhouse, a last-minute reservation at a James Beard-winning restaurant or a prime seat at the trendiest hotspot, just make your reservation at Dcdining.com.

Since the launching of his first site, Donrockwell.com, in 2005 — an online forum where area gastronomes and industry professionals gather to chat (and sometimes bicker) about the region's epicurean happenings — Rockwell has become one of the most well-regarded experts on D.C.'s dining scene. He posts lengthy reviews, moderates arguments and serves as an impresario for the foodie community.

When he isn't online, he's dining out, which helps him maintain his encyclopedic knowledge of the best eateries and introduces him to top chefs and restaurateurs.

"I really know more about this stuff and what's available than just about anybody," he says. "It's my passion."

We put Rockwell's knowledge to the test and asked him to play culinary Cupid this Valentine's Day — especially for you, dear Express reader. Whether chosen for its fine foods or fancy decor, here are his most intimate and upscale restaurant picks for breakfast, lunch and dinner. NEVIN MARTELL

ADOUR

Breakfast

If you want a romantic rise'n' shine, the New York-based chef Alain Ducasse's D.C. outpost is ideal. Its two-person niches along the dining room wall are among the most intimate tables in town. Rockwell recommends ordering a few of pastry chef Fabrice Bendano's Parisian-style offerings, such as flaky croissants and the sweet, sticky pain au raisin. This meal just might make you feel like you're starting your Valentine's Day in the City of Light.

HOT CHOCOLATES

Spice up your Valentine's Day with some peppery chocolates. These locally crafted confections bring together sweet and heat to create a loving union that would make Cupid proud. N.M.

Chipotle Chile Autumnally colored concentric circles and dark chocolate hide this delicacy's blazing core. A mixture of chipotle chile and cayenne pepper creates a flavorful inferno, while hints of vanilla bean and honey ensure that the fire is contained. Artisan Confections, 1025 N. Fillmore St., Arlington; 703-524-0007, Artisanconfections.com.

Lunch

Vidalia is Rockwell's go-to spot when in need of comfort. He's an unabashed fan of the restaurant's Southern-twisted continental cuisine. Cozy up to the fried chicken with black pepper cream gravy, shrimp and grits covered in a shellfish emulsion, below, and the Shenandoah Angus cheeseburger. If you and your paramour can fit it in, order two forks and a slice of lemon chess pie to finish off your noontime tryst.

PLUME

Dinner

The library table at Plume is Rockwell's No. 1 recommendation in the entire city. Bookshelves packed with classics are painted on the walls of this tucked-away alcove. "It's like you're eating dinner at the Vanderbilt mansion," Rockwell jokes. Close the curtains that surround the table to nibble and canoodle in total privacy.

Back-Up

If you can, reserve bar seats in front of chef Koji Terano. "You'll have a personal chef for the evening," says Rockwell. "You can tell him what you like, he'll make it, hand it to you and then explain it."

Sushi Ko, 2309 Wisconsin Ave. NW; 202-333-4187, Sushikorestaurants.com.

THE OVAL ROOM

Back-Up

Send your tummy a Valentine's Day "I love you" card and order the rich chocolate peanut cake with Concord grape sorbet.

The Oval Room, 800 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-463-8700, Ovalroom.com.

Singled Out

Party of You

For those of you actively dodging the love bug, Eden (1716 1st St. NW; 202-785-0270, Edendc.com) transforms its nature-inspired "Green Room" into the sensual "Red Room" for the lounge's "Stupid Cupid" bash. Hit the dance floor solo or couple up to dance to Top 40 beats. Women who arrive before midnight get a free flute of strawberry champagne.

Montezuma This Mexican-inspired bonbon is filled with a creamy dark chocolate ganache spiked with smoky chipotle chilies and piquant Saigon cinnamon. "It's not spicy at first," says confectioner Jane Morris. "But then it kicks people in the teeth as a surprise."

J. Chocolatier, 1039 33 St. NW; 202-333-4111, Jchocolatier.com.

Pink Peppercorn White pepper and pink peppercorn unite for a sweet, floral beginning that gives way to a fiery finale. "The key is the milk chocolate filling," says creator Robert Ludlow. "That smoothes out the bite." Various locations, for details call 804-577-3819 or see Fleurirchocolates.com.

'Skins': Good or Evil?

Returning to "Saturday Night Live"

last week, Dana Carvey's smug Church Lady declared that TV is full of "evil" shows, like "Skins," MTV's hyperstylized tale o' hypersexual teens.

Is "Skins" truly evil? Let's analyze the first episode.

Evidence of good intentions:

"Skins" is nickname for sheath that can prevent sexually transmitted disease and pregnancy. Teen Tony (James Newman, above) arranges for pal Stanley to lose his "V-card." Stanley does not take advantage of designated virginity taker when she passes out due to ingesting "a busload of pills," but he helps drive her to the hospital. Tony displays angelic tenor while auditioning for choir.

Evidence of evil:

Tony's audition song is Cole Porter's "Let's Do It," an apt summation of "Skins'" stance on teen fornication. Tony locks door to home bathroom, enraging dad, then leaves bathroom via window so dad screams at locked door in vain. Tony gives Michelle low self-esteem by saying she has funny nipples. Rampant drug use has no down side, except possible death of Stanley if he fails to pay dealer for $900 worth of marijuana.

Conclusion: The road to hell is paved with good intentions.

PHYLLICIA GHEE

A few short years ago, music was just a hobby for neo-soul singer Carolyn Malachi. But this Sunday night, the D.C. native will find herself up against the likes of Janelle Monae and Cee Lo Green as a Grammy nominee for Best Urban/Alternative Performance for the ethereal song "Orion," off of her breakout EP, "Lions, Fires & Squares."

The great-granddaughter of noted D.C. jazz pianist John Malachi, the vocalist got her start singing in college, becoming a fixture in the city's R&B scene for her eclectic blend of hip-hop, spoken word and soul. She self-produced her first disc last year, and "Orion" quickly took off as a single without any major-label backing or promotion.

Ahead of her red-carpet debut Sunday at the 53rd Annual Grammy Awards (8 p.m., CBS), Express spoke with Malachi about mermaids, Barbra Streisand and the bright side of layoffs.

What did you do after finding out you'd been nominated for a Grammy?

I cried like a big baby. I was actually getting ready to

Award Picks

Who will walk home with a gold-plated gramophone? We offer predictions in two major categories.

Record of The Year

Nominees: B.o.B. & Bruno Mars, "Nothin' On You"; Eminem & Rihanna "Love the Way You Lie"; Cee Lo Green, "F*** You"; Jay-Z & Alicia Keys, "Empire State of Mind"; Lady Antebellum, "Need You Now"

Who Should Win: Cee Lo Green

Who Will Win: Jay-Z & Alicia Keys

The Skinny: Cee Lo's soul anthem is the best kiss-off in years, but Jay-Z's ode to the Big Apple might as well be New York's new theme song.

Album of The Year

Nominees: Arcade Fire, "The Suburbs"; Eminem, "Recovery"; Lady Antebellum, "Need You Now"; Lady Gaga, "The Fame Monster"; Katy Perry, "Teenage Dream"

Who Should Win: Arcade Fire

Who Will Win: Eminem

The Skinny: Eminem wins as a reward for cleaning up his act and to make up for his 2001 loss to Steely Dan, who was similarly snubbed years earlier. (EXPRESS) go onstage at LIV nightclub on U Street. I just fell to my knees and started crying. My stylist and manager were with me. We were celebrating and crying. When I announced the nomination to the audience, everyone's eyes got really big.

What's the story behind "Orion"?

I wrote "Orion" just thinking about the distance between the person I was talking to and myself, feeling like a mermaid trying to reach an astronaut. I was trying to express that feeling of, "Wow, I really feel like it's just too hard to talk to you."

Who are you most excited to see at the Grammys?

I really want to meet Barbra Streisand. I just want to pick her brain. She's established her career and created a legacy just by being who she is. You have to be yourself because that's what's going to make you shine. Her example has definitely taught me that.

If you win, who will you thank in your acceptance speech?

I would definitely thank James McKinney, my producer. He's more than my producer; he's my big brother by now. I'd also thank the other artists in my category. I think it's really cool to be among these talented artists. Just as much as I study my influences, I study my contemporaries.

You released your first two albums while you still had a full-time day job at the National Harbor. What made you take the leap into making music full time?

In 2009, it got pretty tough for everybody. The Gaylord Hotel, just like a lot of companies in the area, had to cut their workforce. My position was one of the positions that was eliminated. The day I got the news, a friend of mine said, "Congratulations; now you have the time to do what you want." KRISTINA GRAY

Virginia's Jack Tatum is the one-man-band behind Wild Nothing

Concert Preview

When Virginia native Jack Tatum started writing songs as Wild Nothing in 2009, he was still a student at Virginia Tech, spending the summer before his senior year in Savannah, Ga. With no job and not much to do, the singer and guitarist began writing dreamy, '80s-pop-influenced songs, with no real aspirations attached.

Tatum posted some demo tracks to MySpace, and a few days later, he got a message. Mike Sniper, head of Brooklyn-based independent label Captured Tracks, wanted to make a full Wild Nothing album.

"Honestly, I probably wouldn't have even made the record if he hadn't asked for one, because that wasn't the sort of thing that I was [planning]," the 22-year-old says.

Tatum spent six months during his senior year writing, recording and producing Wild Nothing's debut album, "Gemini," by himself, with a laptop running GarageBand, a mixer and a microphone.

But songwriting has always been a solitary affair for Tatum. A guitar player since he was 10, he first started writing songs when he was 15, dubbing himself Jack and the Whale, a moniker he continued in college. "I never knew anyone growing up that played music, so I hadn't had that high school band experience," he says.

Dream pop in the best sense, "Gemini" shows the influence of My Bloody Valentine, Cocteau Twins and the Smiths, bands Tatum was listening to as he wrote the record.

"I feel more like a fan of music than a musician, so why would I try to hide what I was listening to or what I wanted my music to sound like?" he explains.

Now backed by a three-piece live band, Tatum isn't sure he's ready to let them into his writing process.

It's "not because I want to be a control freak," he says. "I've just never been able to write music with other people." RUDI GREENBERG (EXPRESS)

Great White Punch Line

Canada is the subject of much mockery via '30 Rock' and 'Parks'

Comedy

NBC 9:30 Canada jokes abound on NBC's staggering comedy block. On "30 Rock" (10 p.m.) Jack (Alec Baldwin) and Avery (Elizabeth Banks) find themselves north of the border when Avery feels stirrings of childbirth. Ever the stalwart patriot, Jack moves mountains to keep his offspring from being born anywhere but the home of the brave.

The snowy dominion also figures in a subplot on "Parks & Recreation" (9:30 p.m.). Tom (Aziz Ansari) has to cut short his dalliance with Ron's (Nick Offerman) ex-wife when she declares that she has to return home to care for her parents — and that her parents are, gasp, Canadian.

Canada jokes aside, you can't say

"Parks and Recreation" isn't trying. Megan Mullally does her best as Ron's ex-wife, a sexually ravenous and deranged librarian. She does inspire the gruff and conservative Ron to have his hair done in cornrows, the episode's funniest moment. Rob Lowe appears to be having fun as a slightly creepy type-A office drone. But the arrival of famous guests usually comes at a time when a sitcom has run out of creative gas. KEVIN McDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Best Bets

The Vampire Diaries Elena (Nina Dobrev, left) and Stefan (Paul Wesley, right) hope to have a romantic weekend at the Gilbert family lake house, unaware that they are being followed.
